Live nation

Hackney Live presenters Jermain Jackman and Aisha Peters introduced five up-and-coming young artists from the borough as they broadcast their talents live on the internet

FIVE young artists from the borough showcased their musical talents via the Hackney Live digital platform.

The event was hosted by winner of BBC talent show 'The Voice' Jermain Jackman – who comes from Hackney – and singer

Aisha Peters. The line-up for the intimate show on 20 February featured singer-songwriters, rappers and poets strutting their stuff in front of a lively studio audience for a 30-minute live internet broadcast. Rapper SNE, 21; singers LaBraya, 20; Josh Tenor, 14; Mychelle, 19; and poet-turned-rapper, Tolu, 19, all gave great performances. For more info and pics, see pages 8-9.

COUNCIL TAX FROZEN

COUNCIL tax will be frozen for a record 10th consecutive year – making Hackney the only local authority in the country to do this.

The move was approved at a full Council meeting on 25 February, when the 2015/16 budget was passed. Councillors also heard Hackney's central government grant for next financial year will be reduced by £36million, bringing the reduction in funding to £130million, or 35 per cent, since 2010.

Despite the cuts, protecting front line services will remain the authority's highest priority. The Council is also committed to building 3,000 new homes, along with a major schools building programme.

Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe, said: "With residents' wages largely frozen and household bills continuing to rise, I believe it's only right that we do all we can to help residents cope with the cost of living.

"Reorganising services and careful financial management means that we are able to continue to protect vital services for vulnerable people, as well as maintain the services that residents tell us matter most to them; keeping the streets clean, our parks looked after, making sure we do all we can to make people feel safe, providing youth services, and ensuring everyone can access education and employment opportunities.

"Areas such as Hackney have felt government cuts harder than more wealthy areas because we rely on our grant to help cover costs for things such as temporary accommodation for those in housing need, services for looked after children and adult social care.

"Our population continues to rise and we need to meet their needs, with new homes, new and expanded schools and investment in local infrastructure. There is no funding from government for us to do this, so we need to find the money ourselves.

"Above all this budget seeks to protect services, but also to make sure the borough has the infrastructure it needs over the next decade."

The Care Act comes into effect from 1 April and marks the most significant national reform in social care for over 60 years

Social care changes

RESIDENTS are being encouraged to find out how they could benefit from changes to social care and support services which are being implemented next month.

The Care Act comes into effect from 1 April and marks the most significant national reform in social care for over 60 years.

The new legislation places strong emphasis on promoting independence; providing easy access to information and advice; offering support to carers; having effective safeguarding measures to protect vulnerable adults; helping young people who receive care progress into adulthood; and a universal standard for eligibility. There are also significant changes to how people will pay for their care.

Over the last year, the Council and its partners

“Promoting independence and supporting older and vulnerable adults... is already at the heart of our social care services”

have been working together closely to prepare for the changes and ensure all requirements are met.

In most instances, the Council already provides services in a way which meets the Care Act requirements, and many service users and carers will not experience any change.

However, significant new measures include: a national eligibility framework for users and carers, which replaces local arrangements and sets out the minimum level of care and support a person must receive; and giving carers the same rights to an assessment and support as people receiving care services.

Other changes include a 'deferred payment' arrangement, whereby someone receiving residential care can request to use the value of their home to fund it, without having to sell the property in their lifetime. From next April, a cap on the amount people will have to pay towards their care will be introduced, which is expected to be about £72,000.

The new eligibility framework covers a broader range of individual needs and goals than the Council's existing framework. These relate to both personal care and preventative support services.

Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Health, Social Care and Culture, said: "Promoting independence and supporting older and vulnerable adults to remain in the homes and communities they know and love is already at the heart of our social care services."

"Though most people will not notice any difference to services when the Act comes into effect, some of the changes, especially around financial issues, can be quite complex. I'd urge anyone who thinks they might be affected, or wants to know more, to visit the Care Act section of the Council website, or give us a call."

Paloma Faith scooped a Brit award for best solo female artist; Filmmakers James Lucas (far right) and Matt Kirkby won an Oscar for 'The Phone Call'

At the top of their game

IT has been a good awards season for the borough, with Hackney people picking up both an Oscar and a Brit.

Filmmaker James Lucas won the Oscar for best live action short at the 87th Academy Awards ceremony on 22 February.

James, who lives in London Fields, co-wrote and co-produced short film, 'The Phone Call', with his colleague Matt Kirkby. Starring Sally Hawkins and Jim Broadbent, it tells the story of a call centre worker who takes a phone call that changes her life.

Both writers were in Los Angeles to receive the award. James thanked the Academy Awards and Matt added: "Thanks to my crew, who all give their time for free. Short films are made not with money. They're made with tenacity and lots of favours. It's impossible to do it without them."

Three days later, at the Brit Awards, Paloma Faith was named best solo female artist at a ceremony in the O2 Arena, Greenwich. This was the third time she was up for the award.

The singer, who grew up in Stoke Newington, referenced her Hackney roots in her acceptance speech, saying: "I used to fly-poster in Hackney for my gigs and I've been arrested twice for doing that. Now I see that my posters are all over Greenwich Tube station legally and that's an amazing feeling."

News in brief

Median Road care centre set to close at the end of month

MEDIAN Road Resource Centre will close on 31 March to make way for new services to support people leaving hospital.

The Council decision reflects the changing needs of patients and the desire of more people to recover from hospital treatment in their own homes.

The E5 centre provides intermediate care for those leaving hospital to aid recovery, and interim care for those too frail or lacking in confidence to return home. There are currently 11 people staying at Median Road and discharge plans are in place for all of them.

Following the closure of the centre this month, intermediate care will be provided by the newly created Reablement and Intermediate Care Service, led by Homerton hospital and supported by the Council.

This service will provide intensive, therapeutic support to people in their homes, bringing services together in one team, and providing bespoke one-stop support for patients. It will provide a single point of access and also extended hours in response to patient feedback. Interim care will be provided in one of the Council's housing with care schemes, which will aim to build patients' confidence and recovery in a supported, domestic setting before they return to their homes. The Council is examining potential uses for the building, including a proposal for temporary accommodation for homeless families. Ultimately, the Council's long-term intention is for it to become a residential care home.

The Median Road Resource Centre will close on 31 March

Hackney got coding in schools throughout February

CHILDREN in schools across Hackney learnt the basics in computing during a 'Get Hackney Coding' campaign last month.

The Council joined forces with technology giant Samsung and other tech partners to run a competition for five to 18-year-olds to design their own game and win the chance to build it.

The campaign used social media to spread the word about the importance of coding in the school curriculum. The Get Hackney Coding hashtag received over 1,000 mentions on Twitter and had an estimated social reach of 6.2million users.

Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe, said: "The Get Hackney Coding campaign, with support from all of our partners, has helped draw attention to the latest addition in the school computing curriculum.

"This will help to give young people the skills to forgo future careers in the tech sector, an industry that is strongly linked to Hackney's economic growth, and worth an estimated £105billion in the UK alone."

The Get Hackney Coding competition winners will be announced in the week following 9 March.

Hackney's roots and culture

By Hattie Worsley

I WAS young when Enoch Powell made his 'rivers of blood' speech," says Don Letts, DJ, musician, filmmaker, broadcaster and legendary godfather of the punk reggae movement of the late 1970s.

Now 59, the man who befriended Bob Marley after sneaking into his hotel; went to Jamaica with Sex Pistols punk pioneer Johnny 'Rotten'; and founded the band Big Audio Dynamite, is remembering the London of his early youth, in the years following the Conservative right-winger's infamous anti-immigration speech in 1968.

"Black people weren't allowed into West End clubs," says Letts. "The streets were dread back then because the cops might pick you up. It forced us into ghettoised areas, anywhere there was a black community, where we could ease our pain with music after grafting all week."

For Letts, that solace was found in the first club to open in Hackney, and one of the first venues to play black music in Britain, The Four Aces on Dalston Lane.

"That club, and another called Phebes on Amhurst Road, were regular haunts of mine in the 70s," says Letts. "They played heavyweight reggae sounds. We had nothing like it in South London at the time, no dedicated reggae clubs."

The Four Aces opened in 1967. Some of the most influential black musicians of the era went on to perform there, including Bob Marley, Desmond Dekker, and The Upsetters.

Around the same time, a former gambling den and hangout of notorious gangsters Ronnie and

“It was the rebel music of the time, a tool for social change. There was talk of roots and culture in those clubs”

Reggie Kray, called The Regency, was reopened as Phebes. The Stoke Newington club introduced light reggae styles into the upstairs lounge and bass-heavy sounds in the basement. Jah Shaka, the legendary sound system operator and producer, had a Friday night residency there throughout the late 1970s and early 1980s.

Afro-Caribbeans began to flock to these two clubs from all over London, as did second-generation immigrants like Letts. "They became places of inspiration and liberation," says Letts. "The optimism of ska had given way to a more militant and politicised sound. It was the rebel music of the time, a tool for social change. There was talk of roots and culture in those clubs."

Into this electric environment Letts introduced his friends, including young musicians Johnny Rotten, The Clash's Joe Strummer, and Arianna from The Slits.

"I'd take them to these Hackney clubs and they would be the only white people there. Consequently, they got a lot of respect. They were like-minded rebels, and people recognised them as kindred spirits. You can hear the huge influence those places had on them just by listening to their music," says Letts.

Adding: "Those times were the start of the whole punky/reggae thing that I'm usually blamed for. But you know what, I'm really proud of it. Those are the roots of today's multicultural Britain, in a way. Politics didn't make that happen, nor did school or religion. Music made it happen."

At the same time, Letts was running a shop called Acme Attractions on the King's Road, Chelsea, selling clothes to emerging punks. Stars like Patti Smith and Debbie Harry all passed through. He was also playing dub and reggae records between the punk acts performing at the West End nightclub, The Roxy. His DJ sets there earned him the reputation of introducing the entire punk scene to reggae.

Today, living in West London, Letts has a weekly radio show on BBC 6 Music. He says: "Hackney is no longer my stomping ground, but I do get to DJ here and it's a trip – it's geared up for people who are young, free and single."

The audience at Hackney's reggae parties has changed, he says: "A lot of white people come to hear me DJ now. The young black people are so eager to find their own soundtrack that they don't stop and look back."

Adding: "I'm happy to be a cultural gatekeeper for the old school reggae vibe. I still believe in music as a tool for change, not just a soundtrack for consumerism. There's a lineage and heritage that I like to think I'm a part of, and I want to pass that on."

enjoyed learning about the traditions and meanings behind the day.

"Hackney has traditionally extended a warm welcome to those from different Event organiser and centre manager, Ian Yau, added: "The celebration generally means good luck and prosperity for the whole year for the community.

"We were really happy the Speaker could make it because it makes us feel that the Council is looking after the Chinese community in Hackney. A lot of Chinese people love living in Hackney."

Chinese New Year took place on 19 February but many communities celebrated the following weekend.

Doing things the write way

Patrice Lawrence's debut novel, 'Last Man Standing', is set to be published by Hodder Children's Books in spring next year. The book is set in Hackney, in a mix of real and fictionalised locations

By Hattie Worsley

WHEN did I become a writer?" asks Patrice Lawrence. It isn't a rhetorical question, she's genuinely unsure. "I've always written, as long as I can remember. I used to bore my friends at school with it, but it's never something I've done full time, even now. I'm not sure I'd have the confidence to call myself a writer."

Plenty of others would, however. When publishing house Hodder Children's Books secured the world rights to her debut novel in January, a senior editor was quoted as saying: 'I knew I wanted to acquire 'Last Man Standing' before I'd finished the first chapter... Patrice is going to become a new star.'

Born in Brighton to Caribbean parents, she grew up in Haywards Heath. She eventually moved to London to study

English and History of Art at Goldsmiths as a mature student. She says: "I'd been one of only three black kids in school, so it was inspiring to find myself in this city full of different cultures and stories. It was like coming home."

Indeed, she moved to Hackney soon after, explaining: "I met my daughter's father and it was like looking at my negative. I was a black woman raised in a white neighbourhood listening to Bruce Springsteen. He was a white man raised in Hackney, where all his friends were black and listening to soul."

She still lives in the borough today. "So much happens here," she says. Adding: "There is so much dramatic material and so much history: when I first moved into the borough I lived near Hoxton Street where the National Front had marched in the 70s and you could still feel that past."

"Today, there's so much difference around: where else do you walk down the street and pass an organic grocers, next to a posh coffee shop, next to a kebab shop? It's a good place to write."

“So much happens here. There is so much dramatic material and so much history... It's a good place to write”

Working full time and with a young baby, she somehow found time to take a masters degree in Creative Writing in Film and TV and earned a distinction. In the snatches of time in between, she wrote. Patrice says: "In my early years in London I used to spend a lot of time on buses. A lot of the time we would be sitting in traffic jams, so I would sit and think and talk to people."

The stories that came out of these bus rides went down on paper, but it wasn't until she won a short story competition sponsored by Penguin that she was spotted by an agent, Caroline Sheldon, and signed up in 2006. When she got her second big break this year, signing a two-book deal with Hodder, both Hackney and buses were involved again.

Patrice explains: "The book is set in Hackney, in a mix of real locations and fictionalised ones. There is a road in it that is very like our own road, and the bus routes I describe in the book are all accurate, that's very important to me."

'Last Man Standing' charts the progress of 16-year-old Marlon, who has promised his widowed mum that he'll be good, unlike his gang-leader brother, Andre. Everything changes, however, when he goes on a date that ends in tragedy and he enters Andre's world of guns, knives and drug runs.

"I wanted to write about what makes a good person do bad things because I think that really can happen to kids," says Patrice.

Her own experience bears that out. Her brother, she says, got into a lot of trouble as a teenager and was saved by becoming a father and taking on that responsibility.

In her other life, when not writing, she has always worked in social justice. And recently, she set up creative writing classes inside prisons. Patrice says: "You could almost chart the downward spiral of some of these young men. Their local community becomes their whole world and that's when things get territorial."

Knowing that it can happen to any family, she stresses: "I didn't want to write stereotypes. I made Marlon a geek, a well-behaved schoolboy before things get out of control."

She is now making the final edits to 'Last Man Standing', working full time and writing her next novel, which Hodder will publish in 2017.

Yet Patrice remains extremely level-headed about her success, claiming: "I'd be writing either way." Still, she does admit: "A bit of non-vintage champagne is being drunk in our house at the moment."

All your green questions answered

Q: I saw someone taking my bin from my front garden. I assumed it was the Council taking it to be emptied but they never brought it back. It was a normal bin without wheels. Do we need a different type? Does the Council provide wheelie ones at all? I'm worried that if we just keep black sacks of rubbish outside it will attract rats.

A: The Council might remove bins that are causing obstructions on the street, but would not take a bin from your front garden. If it was causing a problem and needed to be moved or stored somewhere else, they would have contacted you. The Council does not provide bins but you are welcome to buy your own.

Rats and vermin are attracted to food waste. The best way of deterring them is to separate food from the rest of your rubbish and use the Council's blue bin food waste scheme to dispose of it. It is collected once a week and turned into compost. The Council can provide a small container and bin liners to keep in your kitchen so that there's no smell or mess.

They call it puppet love

By Dila Tumer

DESPITE rainy conditions young environmental champions from a Hackney youth club took to the streets to encourage residents to stop using plastic bags.

Members of the Pembury Youth Club gave out hundreds of reusable cloth bags during a parade on 19 February, which marked the end of a project on the Pembury Estate delivered by environmental regeneration charity Groundwork and funded by the Council.

“Life in Hackney has in some ways become more environmentally friendly and in other ways more wasteful”

The bags, designed by the young people, asked locals to ‘do something drastic and quit using plastic.’

They spent weeks collecting plastic bags and bottles to build a plastic monster puppet and a school of plastic bottle fishes for the parade, to highlight the harm plastic is doing to wildlife in the oceans. The parade marked the end of an intergenerational oral history project on the estate, which allowed senior citizens and younger residents to come together and determine how attitudes towards the environment have changed over time.

Clare Norwood, from Groundwork, said: “The young people discovered that life in Hackney has in some ways become more environmentally friendly and yet in other ways more wasteful and came to the conclusion that plastic waste is a big problem, especially when it ends up in our rivers and oceans.”

Green-fingered residents wanted to get their hands dirty for the Big Dig

GREEN-fingered residents are getting ready to pull on their gardening gloves, as community food projects across the nation host a day of volunteering.

The fourth annual Big Dig day is organised by Capital Growth, London's network of over 2,000 food growing gardens. Set to take place on 21 March, it is expected to be the largest event yet, with almost 100 gardens signed up already.

Eloise Dey, from Capital Growth, said: “The Big Dig day provides a great way to get involved with your local food growing space.”

Six gardens are planning to hold events in Hackney on the day, including: Castle Climbing Centre, N4; Cordwainers Garden, E8; Evering Road Kitchen Garden, N16; Growing Health Garden, E8; Mabley Green, E9; and Robin Hood Community Garden, E5. Volunteers will help these community gardens to prepare for the new season by mucking in with digging, sowing seeds and building raised beds. Both new and experienced growers are welcome to join in.

Perception

Until 2 April, Howard Griffin Gallery, 189 Shoreditch High Street, E1 6HU

IRAN'S most famous street artist has produced some eye-catching work in Hackney to mark the opening of his first UK solo show.

The Howard Griffin Gallery is exhibiting a new body of work by Mehdi Ghadyanloo. The show, titled 'Perception', explores the concept of space through the painter and muralist's signature optical illusions and surrealist dreamscapes. Over the past eight years, Mehdi's murals have been popping up all over his home city of Tehran. He portrays impossible scenes and gravity-defying figures from radically altered perspectives.

Mehdi's work is set to be exhibited both inside the gallery and on the streets of London (see above in Shoreditch). It is the first time the artist has painted murals outside of Tehran.

PREVIEW

Sex Shop

Until 29 March, Transition Gallery, 8 Andrews Road, E8 4QN

AS venues for first dates go, this one could be a little too bold...

The latest show to open at Transition Gallery is entitled Sex Shop. Curators Sarah Gillam Jack Stokoe and Darren Nairn have invited 50 artists, designers and creative people to develop a prototype version of their own sex or fetish object. From philosophers and puppet makers to graphic designers and shoe designers, the resulting work playfully engages with issues surrounding sex and desire, referencing a panoply of sexual practices and merchandise. The art is by turns personal, provocative and even ... usable. When Sex Shop opened as part of the Folkestone Fringe festival last summer, it played on the seaside town's identity as a place of secret liaisons and dirty weekends. Now transported to Hackney, it aims to also reflect this community.

Whether those are accurately portrayed through the work exhibited – including a three dimensional representation of the internal workings of a clitoris, and a contract from China about sex trafficking routes – we leave for you to decide. Sex Shop takes place at Transition Gallery in two parts. Part One is open 28 Feb-14 March; Part Two 15-29 March. For more info, visit: www.transitiongallery.co.uk

Big honours for top students

By Sheerie Barker & Dila Tumer

A YOUTUBE sensation and a Youth Parliament member were among the students honoured at the Hackney Community College (HCC) student awards.

The packed-out ceremony, now in its 25th year, celebrated the achievements and talents of students from across all areas of college life.

Ridwan Khan, 18, who received the creative/tech award for establishing a successful YouTube channel, Gamer4Ever, which has over 70,000 subscribers, said: "Get yourself out there, keep pursuing. I've been doing YouTube for four years; I've reached 16million views and it's still growing slowly."

Ryan Praag, 18, won an award for promoting equality and diversity as the disabilities officer on Hackney Youth Parliament.

He said: "It feels good to win. I've been very lucky to have such supportive tutors. What I want to do now is what I want to do for the rest of my life, and that's helping people."

Family, friends and staff at the event were also treated to live entertainment from students with a dance performance, acrobatics and fashion show.

Tasty canapes were prepared and served by hospitality students. Dishes on offer included

"We've got thousands of students who are successful every year, but it's nice just to give congratulations to a few"

pork belly and mash, jewelled tilapia and coconut rice, and brownies.

Michelle Bassom, 27, who received the hospitality student of the year award, said: "Food is something I've always enjoyed doing and I've been offered a place at university to study catering."

The

venue also doubled as an exhibition space for artwork by students, with screen prints hung across the walls. The catwalk featured designs by fashion and textiles students.

Ian Ashman, HCC Principal, said: "We've got thousands of students who are successful every year, but it's nice just to give particular congratulations to a few people."

"The awards serves two purposes: to recognise our students' success, and the diversity of that success, because we have such a different range of students; and to show the college to the wider world so people understand all the different kinds of work we do."

At the end of each academic year, staff nominate students for the different award categories and then a panel of judges select the winners.

Student Bola Ajenifuja, who compered the night, said: "I moved to Hackney from Chicago. Just seeing the people here – they're so young with so much talent. It's truly amazing and that's just at HCC, so imagine how much talent there is through the rest of the borough."

The ceremony took place at creative agency Mother in Shoreditch on 25 February. The awards were sponsored by creative space Here East; global workplace learning company, City and Guilds; and Tesco, which provided gourmet food ingredients.

Two members of US soccer team LA Galaxy, Chris Klein and Alex Savva, were special guests at Action for Children's Hackney Young Carers service

YOUNG people caring for their ill or disabled relatives were star struck when two members of US soccer team LA Galaxy visited the Hackney Young Carers Project at Britannia Leisure Centre.

Team president, Chris Klein, and the side's nutrition expert, Alex Savva, flew in especially from Ireland where LA Galaxy is currently in pre-season training. The duo donated $20,000 (nearly £13,000) to the project and presented the children with LA Galaxy tour t-shirts.

Chris, who played over 100 games for the team – famous for signing former England captains David Beckham and Steven Gerrard – led a training session for young carers aged between nine and 13 who use the service.

Manager Vera Beining said: "We were all delighted to have such an inspiring visit from LA Galaxy. The children were thrilled to get the chance to play football with a US soccer star, and to hear about the importance of nutrition from such a high-profile expert.”

Young carers proudly show off the healthy food they cooked

Run by Action for Children, the project supports children and young people who have caring responsibilities for a relative with a long-term illness or disability.

They often shoulder the responsibility for housework and cooking when at home, despite lacking the skills or budget to shop for healthy ingredients or cook nutritious meals.

Alex, who led a cookery class for the youngsters, said: “We treat nutrition and sporting success as being inseparable. To have the opportunity to pass on some of this knowledge, through cooking, to kids who will utilise it in their everyday lives is a rewarding experience for us to be a part of.”

The most decorated team in US Major League Soccer, LA Galaxy was recently honoured by US President Obama for its work with its communities, carried out through its relationship with nutrition company Herbalife.

Homeless charity gets £100K

By Dila Tumer

A NEW housing project is set to open in the borough to help tackle homelessness among young people with disabilities.

City YMCA London received a £100,000 grant from the City of London Corporation's charity, City Bridge Trust for the scheme. Its current base in Islington is closing for two years for redevelopment, so the grant will be used to refurbish a former care home in Hackney as an interim hostel. It will cover the costs of adapting six fully-accessible bedrooms in Monarch Court, E9, for young disabled people. After two years, the building will continue to provide shelter for young people. Over the past 40 years, City YMCA has helped more than 10,000 'at-risk' young people, aged 16 to 25, from Hackney, Islington and Tower Hamlets, by providing accommodation, training and workshops.

For more info, visit: www.cityymca.org; or call: 020 7367 5500.

Boroughs unite for talent show

OVER 250 young people, aged five to 21, congregated at the Hackney Empire on 21 February to enjoy the annual Boroughs United youth talent show and join its campaign against gun and knife crime.

London's longest running youth-talent showcase, Boroughs United has been organised by Hackney charity The Crib since 1999.

It brings together over 2,000 young people from across the 33 London boroughs to promote the talents and positive contributions of young people.

This year's Hackney winners included E-kidz, who triumphed in the under-13s category; singers Abigail Tulley and Kagan Faga-Burgin; and MC That Loud. Each act received a coveted Boroughs United trophy.

Residents Ermira Alishani and Brian Toomey both quit smoking with Hackney's Stop Smoking Service. No Smoking Day takes place on 11 March

Proud to be quitters

SMOKERS in Hackney are being urged to take the first step in giving up cigarettes for good as part of No Smoking Day on 11 March.

While studies show that two-thirds of smokers want to quit, more than one in five adults continue to smoke in Hackney.

This year's No Smoking Day theme is 'proud to be a quitter', which hopes to inspire thousands of smokers to believe in their ability to break the habit.

As part of the day,

“I didn't think that I was strong enough to stay off the cigarettes... now I believe that I can do it”

specialist stop smoking advisers will be at Ridley Road market, from 10am to 4pm; and the Redmond Community Centre, Heron GP Practice, and Cedar GP Practice from 11.30am to 4.30pm.

Ermira Alishani gave up two months ago, after 20 years, with the help of Hackney's Stop Smoking Service. She said: "I didn't think that I was strong enough to stay off the cigarettes. I didn't believe in myself enough. Now I believe that I can do it."

Brian Toomey also gave up smoking two months ago with support from the service. He said: "I feel healthier, my breathing has improved and I'm even a little richer."

Adding: "Don't fall at the first hurdle, take it a day at a time and use a stop smoking service, they can really help you."

Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Health, Social Care and Culture, said: "Most smokers want to quit but can find it a real challenge. No Smoking Day is the perfect opportunity to quit and know that thousands of others across the country will be joining you."

"Smokers are four times more likely to quit with support, rather than go it alone, so Hackney's Stop Smoking Service will be on hand to help you make this the day you start to stop smoking."

The annual campaign, run by the British Heart Foundation, encourages hundreds of thousands of smokers to make an attempt to quit for good.

Find out more information about the national campaign at: nosmokingday.org.uk; or join the conversation on Twitter using the hashtag #NoSmokingDay.

News in brief

New law for driving under the influence of certain drugs

NEW regulations aimed at stopping people driving while on drugs have come into force in England and Wales. Drivers face prosecution if they exceed limits set for the presence of eight illegal drugs, including cannabis and cocaine. It is also illegal for people to drive with certain levels of eight prescription drugs or over-the-counter medicines in their blood, if they're found to be unfit to drive, or the drugs haven't been prescribed by a doctor. Police will be able to use 'drugalyser' devices at the roadside to test drivers.

Residents should speak to their GP about whether they should drive if they have been prescribed clonazepam; diazepam; flunitrazepam; lorazepam; methadone; morphine; oxazepam; and temazepam.

Duty Doctor system allows for same day phone consultation

PATIENTS registered with a Hackney GP can now get a same day phone consultation with a doctor from their practice if they have been unable to book a face-to-face appointment.

The Duty Doctor system helps patients who may not be sure if they need to see a GP, or when there are no same day appointments left at their surgery.

A qualified GP will call patients back, assess symptoms and, if safe and appropriate, advise on the best course of treatment. If a further consultation in person is needed, they can help arrange an appointment, or write a prescription for collection.

May Cahill, Chair of City and Hackney Clinical Commissioning Group's (CCG) urgent care programme board, said: "We are striving to provide better access for patients during practice opening hours."

"Many people tell us that instead of taking time away from family or work when they're not sure if they need an appointment, a phone conversation and advice from their GP is what they would find most helpful."

Who are you going to call? The Duty Doctor

The Mayor and councillors

Councillors are elected by Hackney residents and serve for four years. The last borough elections took place in May 2014.

Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee the Council and its services. They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues that may be of concern. Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see. Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – see map below.

MAYOR JULES PIPE

Hackney has an executive Mayor, Jules Pipe, who is not a councillor, but is directly elected by the entire borough. The Mayor is the political leader of the Council, overseeing the budget and all Council services. Civic and ceremonial duties are undertaken by the Speaker of Hackney who is elected annually from among the borough's 57 councillors. The current Speaker is Cllr Sharon Patrick.

The 1930s slum clearance

A PROJECT to unlock the capital's film heritage is resulting in hours and hours of fascinating archive footage being released online.

Hackney Archives is an active member of the London Screen Archive (LSA) and has so far digitised 41 films as part of the project, 22 of which are now available on the LSA website.

These include 'Slum Clearance' a silent film made by Hackney Council in 1935, which features Banister House Estate in Homerton. It illustrates the terrible conditions people were living in at the time; their damp-ridden houses so badly infested with bugs that possessions had to be fumigated in a cyanide chamber at the Millfields disinfecting station.

The film charts the progress as residents are moved out of slums, with their old homes fumigated before demolition, in a bid to prevent the spread of vermin, and families finally rehomed in the newly built Banister House, which had 160 flats capable of housing 669 people.

Records held at the Archives show that despite the dilapidated state of the houses – with inspectors finding them unfit for human habitation – the owners sometimes confidently assured the Council that there was nothing wrong with the buildings.

The owner of houses in Banister Street declared that they were in average condition with no defects in the brickwork or serious damp problems.

Exterior of Nisbet House, 1939

He also disagreed entirely with the Council's insistence that toilets should be accessible from inside a house, rather than from an external yard. However, the evidence of the film shows that the Council was right to demand their destruction and to move residents to clean, new homes.

Following the Housing

Act of 1930, extensive slum clearance programmes were undertaken, with streets totally demolished and replaced by estates such as Powell House, which opened in 1934; Banister House in 1935; Nisbet House in 1938; with the first blocks of Morningside Estate opening two years later.

Inevitably, over the 80 years since the estates were built they too, along with other social housing schemes, have needed repair and renovation.

Ten years ago, the Council launched its Decent Homes improvements project which has since seen £184million invested to upgrade windows, bathrooms and kitchens in thousands of properties.

This work has been administered by Hackney Homes, an arms' length not-for-profit management company that was able to secure external funding, allowing the Council to focus its attention on the more strategic management of its social housing.

The Decent Homes programme is now drawing to a close, so tenants and leaseholders were consulted last year on a proposal to return management of the borough's housing stock to the Council. Over half of those who responded agreed with the proposal that management should once more be in-house, and this will happen next year.

Saffron potato kookoo

Makes approx 20

Preparation time

Cooking time
15 mins

Kookoo – a Persian egggy dish similar to an omelette – can be served as a lunch or light supper, with bread and salad. It also makes an attractive dinner-party starter with a dipping sauce of Greek yoghurt, fresh coriander and a sprinkling of black onion seeds, or can be used as a sandwich filling with fresh herbs and pickled cucumbers.

Ingredients

- 650g (approx 5) large waxy potatoes, such as Desiree
- 4 eggs, beaten
- 1 tsp curry powder
- ½ tsp ground saffron, dissolved in 2 tsp boiled water
- ½ tsp turmeric
- 2 tbsp Greek yoghurt
- sunflower oil
- ½ tbsp black onion seeds or Nigella seeds.

into a large mixing bowl

- Add the eggs and stir in the curry powder, saffron water, turmeric and yoghurt. Season. Whisk well to make a smooth batter, the longer you whisk, the fluffier the fritters will be
- Grease two 12-hole muffin trays with sunflower oil. Spoon the batter into the trays and sprinkle with black onion seeds or Nigella seeds

- Bake for 12-15 minutes, or until the fritters have risen slightly and are turning golden. Remove from the oven and let them cool a little on a rack before turning out
- Serve the kookoo warm or cold.

Method

- Preheat the oven to 180°C. Boil the potatoes until tender, allow to steam dry and cool, then peel and grate

Update on the consultation to improve Northwold Road

WORK has begun to make improvements to Northwold Road in a bid to reduce accidents.

The move comes after the Council consulted residents and businesses last summer on proposals to improve pedestrian, bus and cycle safety in the area.

There had been 11 accidents over a three year period along Northwold Road, involving one serious road traffic accident, two pedestrian related accidents, and three accidents involving cyclists.

Nearly 200 people responded to the consultation, with more than 69 per cent of responses broadly in support of the proposals to improve the pedestrian accessibility along Northwold Road, between Stamford Hill (A10) and Upper Clapton Road (A107).

The resulting roadworks should be completed in about six months. For more information on this, and for other consultations, visit: consultations.hackney.gov.uk

Introduction from the Mayor of Hackney

Hackney Council’s budget for 2015/16 comes into effect from 1 April. Despite unprecedented Government cuts of over £130m since 2010, this year’s budget will see Council Tax frozen for the 10th successive year – making us the only local authority in the country to ever achieve this. More importantly, it continues to prioritise and protect vital, frontline services including education, adults’ and children’s social care, public health, crime reduction, waste and recycling collections, maintaining our parks and green spaces and keeping our streets clean and tidy.

The Government’s cuts are being imposed against a backdrop of increasing demand for Council resources and rising costs that are outside of our control. For example, the Freedom Pass alone now costs Hackney £12m, adult social care £100m, and services for children and young people more than £50m, so careful financial management has never been more important. Balancing the books is getting tougher every year, and we expect even further cuts to be made to our budget next year, so staff across all Council departments are working hard to keep things working with reduced resources.

We will honour our commitment to build 3,000 new homes, along with a major schools building programme, in order to keep up with the demands of our growing population. There is no funding from government for us to do this, so we need to find the money ourselves. We’ve already made back office savings, scaled back on layers of management and looked at supplies, contracts and how we provide services; now we have to think more creatively. This means continuing to use the borough’s high land values, including building homes for private sale, to generate the funds that I hope as many of you as possible will join in and help us to shape Hackney over the coming years. We’ll be letting you know more about how to get involved through Hackney Today and our social media channels. If you’d like to feed back any of thoughts on the 2015/16 budget, please feel free to email me at mayor@hackney.gov.uk allow us to maximise the number of affordable homes we provide out of any development, build the new schools we need, and develop vital social amenities.

Some people might ask why we don’t simply increase Council Tax, but the maximum 1.99 % rise the Council can increase it without a referendum would raise just £400,000. That sounds a lot but it comes nowhere near covering the £130m cut by central Government for our day-to-day services, nor the £9m it costs to build a primary school. Furthermore, with residents’ wages largely frozen and household bills continuing to rise, I think it’s only right that we do all we can to all we can to help residents cope with the cost of living. I believe this budget is fair and makes the most of diminishing resources.

We want Hackney to be a place for everyone – a place where everyone can succeed, a place that everyone can enjoy and a place where everyone can contribute - and this budget reflects that. I am ambitious for Hackney; as well as supporting and protecting the vulnerable, we want to help all residents to access the opportunities open to them in this exciting borough. Hackney is changing fast and as a Council we need to keep up with this change, and we want to ensure that residents don’t feel left behind. The ‘tough choices’ are not just for politicians and council staff; we want to develop our approach and future budgets with input from everyone in Hackney. We’ll do this by going out and seeking your views in a way we’ve never done before; in March we’ll be holding an independently chaired debate about the future of the borough; we’ll be encouraging more residents to get involved in our e-panel and focus groups; we’re creating an online space for you to air your views and ideas and getting out to speak to as many of you as possible. We want to develop channels through which residents can make a genuine contribution to local debate, policy development and service improvement.

Your services in 2015/16

Despite tough decisions that will need to be made in coming years, the Council has set a budget that prioritises essential frontline services. Here are just some of the things that we will be providing in the year ahead in Hackney: A Place for everyone.

A great place to live

- ✓ 162 miles of streets will be cleaned at least twice a week and in some cases constantly
- ✓ We will provide cycle training for around 1,800 residents and expand our cycle loan scheme

A great place to call home

- ✓ We will continue to lobby Government for a fairer private rented sector
- ✓ The management of Council housing in Hackney will return into the Council's control in April 2016
- ✓ We will build more than 3,000 new homes over the next four years – half of which will be affordable
- ✓ More than 2,400 residents will be supported by our housing needs team to prevent homelessness or join the housing register

A great place to enjoy

- ✓ Over 1.7m visits will be made to the borough's eight libraries, with 285,000 books available
- ✓ We will maintain 330 hectares of green spaces, which have been awarded 17 green flags
- ✓ We will continue to provide 24/7 warden and CCTV services and working with police and other partners to tackle anti-social behaviour
- ✓ Over 230,000 visits will be made to London Fields Lido alone – and 1.8 million to our other leisure facilities

A great place to grow up

- ✓ Free activities and support for more than 7,000 8-19 year olds will continue at our five Young Hackney hubs

A great place to succeed

- ✓ We will continue to develop the Opportunities Hub, offering mentoring and training to help residents tap into the local business community
- ✓ More pupils and businesses will join the Hackney 100 – giving young people the chance to earn the London Living Wage by working with top local firms
